PROPOSAL DEADLINE: September 30, 2019

INTRODUCTION:

The U. S. Soybean Export Council (USSEC) requests proposals to assist in the advancing the competitive advantage of U.S. exports to increase demand through the reduction of market access barriers.

Through a global network of international offices and strong support in the U.S., USSEC helps build a preference for U.S. soybeans and soybean products, advocate for the use of soy in feed, aquaculture and human consumption, promote the benefits of soy use through education and connect industry leaders through a robust membership program.

PURPOSE OF RFP:

USSEC's standard practice is to RFP every 3 years in an openly and competitive manner. This type of cost analysis will assist in determining the fair market value for the work to be performed and allows USSEC the opportunity to evaluate various proposals and select the best contractor for the job based on experience, availability, expertise, approach, and cost

The purpose of this RFP is to see proposals to devise a strategy for a combined effort to build a competitive advantage for U.S. commodities like corn, sorghum, soybeans, barley and wheat through the establishment of a two-way and complete understanding of the regulatory requirements and customer values that then couples with the attributes of the U.S. production and supply chain. Through these efforts, this U.S. can gain competitive advantage through a system-wide response to the challenges for meeting customer needs and import requirements.

BACKGROUND & PURPOSE OF PROJECT:

A competitive advantage for U.S. commodities can be established if a complete understanding of regulatory requirements and customer values can be coupled with the attributes of the U.S. production and supply chain to provide information to support a U.S. system wide response to the challenges for meeting customer needs and import requirements.

U.S. exports are subject to an increasing number of non-tariff barriers, often tied to product safety and quality, that reduce market access and competitiveness. The entire value chain is concerned with safety, quality and compliance with relevant import requirements.

By bringing the relevant participants in the value chain (farmers, traders, grain handlers, and government representatives) together, this project will seek to identify the concerns and steps that can be taken to mitigate non-tariff trade barriers. Although this approach can be used with many destinations for U.S. exports, China will be the initial focus so that the U.S. can be armed when any opportunity to access the China market opens for any one or all grains and oilseeds.

China has broadly articulated some of its needs in the form of Administrative Measures of Inspection and Quarantine for the Entry and Exit Grain (Decree 177) which suggests exporter nations present “protocols” to provide for compliance. However, farmers, exporters and other supply chain participants lack sufficient details and understanding of the regulatory goals and approaches, and at the same time, need to demonstrate to China the safe, innovative and competitive capacity of the U.S. production and marketing system.

A comprehensive review of China’s import requirements coupled with fair and complete representation and some consideration for modification of the U.S. grain and oilseed production, handling and distribution system needs to be undertaken to provide for information and outline steps to reduce and potentially eliminate the non-tariff barriers. Building this two-way and complete understanding of the regulatory requirements and customer values that then couples with the attributes of the U.S. production and supply chain will provide for a competitive advantage in meeting Chinese customer and U.S. value chain.

By providing for more satisfactory, predictable and sustainable trading relationships between the United States and China, the project will be a basis from which an aligned strategy to achieve the goal of mitigating China’s non-tariff barriers to grains and oilseeds by providing for information to demonstrate how the U.S. value chain meets China’s import requirements. The project will deliver a complete analysis of the actions and impacts of the various actions by the players within the value chain as they relate to all aspects of China’s requirements including foreign material and weed seed content, plant pests, pesticide residues and production technologies including plant biotechnology as outlined by Decree 177 and other Chinese measures impacting imports from the U.S. Using this as a foundation, U.S. grain and oilseed production and marketing systems can work with our Chinese customers as well as our respective governments to reach trade enabling measures so that the U.S. can best meet China’s Decree 177 and other destination requirements.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

SUPPLEMENTAL INFORMATION AND BACKGROUND

BUILDING A PREFERENCE FOR U.S. SOY

USSEC's strategy can be found here: <http://ussec.org/about-ussec/vision-mission/>

USB's Long Range Strategic Plan can be found here: <http://unitedsoybean.org/about-usb/strategic-planning/>

We are a dynamic partnership of key stakeholders representing soybean producers, commodity shippers, merchandisers, allied agribusiness and agricultural organizations.

Through a global network of international offices and strong support in the U.S., we help build a preference for U.S. soybeans and soybean products, advocate for the use of soy in feed, aquaculture and human consumption, promote the benefits of soy use through education and connect industry leaders through a robust membership program.

Our 15-member board of directors is comprised of four members from the American Soybean Association (ASA), four members from the United Soybean Board (USB), and seven members representing trade, allied industry, and state organizations.

New board members are seated annually. We are receiving funding from a variety of sources including soy producer checkoff dollars invested by the USB and various state soybean councils; cooperating industry; and the American Soybean Association's investment of cost-share funding provided by the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Foreign Agriculture Service.

The United Soybean Board, created by the 1990 Farm Bill to manage and direct the National Soybean Checkoff, is dedicated to marketing and research for the soybean industry. USB is comprised of 73 volunteer soybean farmers representing the interests of fellow growers nationwide. Each board member is nominated by Qualified State Soybean Boards (QSSBs) and appointed by the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture.

Because of the limitations on administrative and salary costs established in the Act, USB outsources the majority of its program management responsibilities to USB's three primary contractors:

- SmithBucklin-St. Louis for domestic marketing, new uses, production research and Board initiative activities;
- Osborn & Barr Communications for communications/public relations activities and;
- United States Soybean Export Council (USSEC) for international marketing and global opportunities activities.

As one of these three primary contractors USSEC may also undertake initiative activities on behalf of USB. USB considers primary contractor staff (approximately 60 people) as core USB staff. These three primary contractors use a number of subcontractors and, together, these entities carry out approximately 450 projects each year for USB. USB also manages approximately 10 subcontractors.
